Great Bear Lake Area Is Mecca of Mining Men

PLANES ROAR, BREAKS QUIET OF CENTURIES

Close on two centuries ago, the first white man saw Great Bear Lake, when Samuel Hearne trocked overland from the shores of Hudson Bay in an effort to find a new overland "Northwest Passage."

Through those years, the lake and its surroundings changed little. No man more than three years ago, the source of life-giving radium, were hidden under the stratified waves of colored rock lining the shores of that inland sea.

Then, little more than three years ago, the strident scream of an airplane ripped the silence of the centuries into tatters as C. H. "Punch" Dickens piloted his plane over Great Bear Lake, carrying Gilbert LaBine, the mining man who found the silver and the radium on the shores of Great Bear Lake.

Other white men had been into Great Bear Lake between Hearne and Dickens and his two passengers LaBine and E. C. Paul.

Jack Murphy, the "hose wolf of the barrens," had mushed in there and come out with rich samples. His samples drew no attention, however, because at that time, before the war, Great Bear Lake was looked upon as a years' journey from civilization.

Dr. MacIncholl Bell made a trip in 1907 for the Dominion government and reported favorably on the formation. "Rags" Wilson, colorful scout Hudson's Bay Company, Northern Traders, Uncle Sam's Exchange or the Empire Exchange and swiftly landed there.

Then the whisper grew to a shout. The rush was on. — Great Bear lake became the Mecca of mining men. By canoe, kicker-dog-team, but chiefly by plane, the rush was on to the clank of picks, the blast of dynamite, the hum of outboard motors and the drone of planes, shattered the age-old silence of the shores of Great Bear lake.

When the first explorers, rugged apart its mineral rocks for the mineral wealth buried through centuries.

The stories that began to drift out of the north, without "colligation" of any kind, Cal. Spencer added. The present average monthly income, after deducting all expenses, is $2,500, with an increase of about $2,000 expected shortly.

Hence Oil, he concluded, had definitely entered the mining field, having secured interests in a number of gold mining companies.

Northern Eagle

The drone of C. H. "Punch" Dickens' airplane motor was the first ever heard over the inland sea called Great Bear lake. ### COMPLIMENTS OF THE "TIMES"

Over in England they persist in thinking that Canada is not treating them very well in the matter of the tariff. And, despite the characteristic restraint of the Englishman, the feeling does occasionally find its way into the press.

Thus, the Financial Times "finds it hard to believe that Canada's adherence to the sterling bloc last week is entirely unconnected with the announcement that Canada is floating $75,000,000 in London." Perhaps Premier Bennett, who is still in England, can construe that as a flattering interpretation of his broad-minded statesmanship.

The Times continues: "Canada has not been the most eager of the dominions to open her markets to British exporters. If the present loan contributes to a more favorable attitude toward British goods in Canada it will be well worth while." The Times was certainly in complimentary mood that day.

But if the Times really hopes that the Government of Canada will reduce its tariff against British goods, it owes her gratitude for having paid the loan. It does not know our Government as well as its first remark would suggest.

LEADERSHIP GETS RESULTS

President Roosevelt has some cause to feel flattered, and great cause to feel gratified, at the response United States taxpayers are making to his appeal for a voluntary action in raising wages and creating employment. The proverbially "hard-headed" businessmen of the republic have apparently decided that they cannot prosper unless and until the public buying power is restored. They are joining enthusiastically in the campaign to make money circulate, through the payment of wages.

Something more than a year ago a parallel incident occurred in Great Britain, when the Government appealed to the holders of national bonds to turn those in and accept bonds bearing lower rates of interest. The response to that invitation was also remarkable, for millions of pounds were cut off the annual interest bill.

The Government of Australia a year or so ago made a like appeal to holders of state and municipal bonds there, and with like happy results.

The moral of all these incidents is that leadership is not a played-out force in human affairs. Given a Government that is resolutely trying to "get somewhere", the great mass of people in any enlightened country will give it their enthusiastic co-operation when asked to do so, even at the cost of having out of their hands money they never see again or of making known and substantial personal sacrifice.

Had they been invited, the people of Canada would have been only too ready to stand by the people of Britain, the United States and Australia to unite in a common and voluntary effort to reduce the burden of public debt or to break up the condition of stagnation in which they have been wallowing for the last three years. They have been given no incentive in either the one direction or the other.

Instead, our Government has pleaded helplessness either to reduce the burden of its debt or to raise income taxes, and has resorted to raising taxes and paying relief money to the steadily growing army of unemployed, and has added insult to the public's injury by blame measures about the cultural benefits of adversity.

NEITHER HERE NOR THERE

Hon. T. G. Murphy assured Edmonton that the Government was going to continue construction of the highway among the mountain peaks and glaciers of Jasper to Banff, and he expected to thereby arouse any considerable amount of local enthusiasm it is to be feared the Minister is doomed to disappointment.

That Edmonton would like to hear, and feels itself entitled to hear, is that the Dominion would give some assistance to the province in completing the projected highway from Edmonton to Jasper. Since Mr. Murphy gave no indication of any such intention, it is to be assumed there is none, and that so far as present Ottawa plans go Jasper Park may continue to be from Edmonton and the motor traffic of the continent to the end of the road.

Without the completion of the highway from Edmonton to Jasper, promises to continue construction of the scenic by-way from Jasper to Banff leave people in Edmonton and throughout central and northern Alberta "cold." That road, however scenic and however costly, means nothing to Edmonton or to this part of Alberta, and not much to Jasper, unless and until the Park is made accessible to motor traffic to and from this city.

Whether the Government of Alberta has urged the Dominion Government to assist in the completion of the Jasper Highway the public do not know. What they do know is that the Dominion has been asked for it has not been given, that if it has not been asked for it should have been, and that the Dominion is sacrificing the purpose of the Jasper Park, and ignoring the legitimate interests of the people of this province, in not granting or offering the assistance.

So long as Jasper Park is kept shut off from through traffic it can never become anything but a "great national playground" or other than a bill expense to the Dominion Government. While that policy prevails—and Mr. Murphy gives no hint that it is to be departed from—there is no apparent reason why anybody should cheer at the news that the Government is at it, as questioning public money building goat tracks across the inaccessible crests and ice-fields of the Rockies.

PRICES VERSUS EXCHANGE

From the monthly Business Summary issued by the Bank of Montreal:—The World Economic Conference has split on the rock of exchange stabilization. The monetary issue has at least been fully cleared up. As to the two plans of currency stability—stability in purchasing power and stability in exchange value between countries—President Roosevelt in his outspoken message to the Conference of July 3rd unequivocally declared the former as his first objective, as against the "gold bloc" contention for exchange stability based preferably on the gold standard, the gold standard by the countries which have abandoned it.

As they whirled around the dance floor she asked: "What part of the country are you from?"

The Passing Show

By J. S. Cooper

Every day has its heart-beat; every rose its thorn. General Balbo was the admiration of the world by his feat in bringing his fleet of seaplanes across the Atlantic. He has brought with him a set of whiskers. Now with that feat passing to leave the best of the world in setting out to make a facial stripe crop a Balbo. Before long the universities will be filled with undergraduates—frequently misnamed "students"—each with a cushion of hope on his hope and a modicum of brains in his skull.

There is a real danger even to the cause of aviation, in the admiration drawn forth by the feat of Balbo and his men, of Matern and Post and the Molossians. These hazardous flights by intrepid flyers keep up the sensation of aviation and danger.

Stunt experts are only for the stunt flyers. What aviation needs is to impress the public with its utility and safety. Who in reading of the crash of the Matern, a private plane, has not brought to mind the crash of the Russian airman who flew to his rescue from the Black Sea in a 14,000 mile flight.

Most of us are for aviation even though Wiley Post's great solo flight round the world is the modest item given but by Imperial Airways selling of what some of their pilots have done in the way of safe commercial flying. They have flown six million miles between them in the eight years since Imperial Airways commenced carrying passengers and mail. One of them has flown a million miles, yet his name—Captain Oiley—is virtually unknown.

There's a lot of common sense in the story of the bishop who advertised for a chairman and narrowed the applicants down to three whom he personally interviewed. He wanted to know how stout a chairman he could get, and if they could drive the episcopal carriage and himself.

One said he could do it within eight inches of the brink. The second said he could do it within six inches. The third said he could do it within four inches. "I'm not driving any carriage near the edge of a precipice, I'd keep as far away from the edge as possible," he said.

Yes, that's just the job. The story of what these Imperial Airways pilots have done in the way of safe travel will do more for aviation than flying round the world in three days.

After studying relations between Canada and United States, the Congressional and Christian Democratic International Relations Committee has concluded that Canadian officials Americans. They offer 24 reasons for this alleged dislike. They think that the United States is not friendly to the League of Nations, that we think they have been hypocritical about liquor control; that we are fearful of their large investments in Canada; that we do not wish to see them in a position to take over all that we feel that in cases of war between Britain and United States our position would be difficult.

Some of the 24 "reasons" may have truth in them, and some may not. The investigators overlooked two valid reasons for our thumbing our noses at the United States. One is that we are Canadians from moving to United States and the liberations of Arthur Brisbane.

Naturally, Mr. Brisbane commented for his millionaires. He said that the United States and his men. He undertook to give a history of flying from the time of Orville Wright to Wiley Post. He said that the United States had offered a prize for the first cross-Canada flight, and sure the first flight across Canada was made by a Canadian.

Then Blizlet flew across the Channel, then Lindegher flew the Atlantic to Paris.

No wonder for a moment thinks that Brisbane said that on May 19, before the Lincoln flight, Alcock and Brown in an old crock of a machine made the first flight across the Atlantic—in the open air.

Arthur is certainly entitled to a place on the list of "reasons."

ULTRA VIOLET RAYS HAVE MANY USES
There has been a great deal of talk about the value of ultra violet rays, but most of the information given has been of a general nature. I believe that my readers would be interested in knowing about some of the actual uses of these rays.

One of the most important uses of ultra violet rays is in the treatment of skin diseases. These rays which may be produced by special lamps or by carbon arc lamps are similar to certain rays given out by the sun, but they have other advantages in that they may be given in a controlled form from which certain rays are filtered. These rays are used in the treatment of skin diseases and in cleaning up a variety of skin disorders.

For example, in acne the doctor is successful in overcoming the unnatural activity of the oil glands of the skin. The treatment in this case should be of such strength as to produce an over-drying of the skin. The use of ultra violet rays with this equipment, a partial substitute may be had through the use of sunbathing by lying under the sun. This treatment is similar to the use of ultra violet rays by lying in the sun with the face uncovered for thirty minutes to an hour. The eyes should be shut and it is better for glasses to be worn. Eczema is treated in a similar way.

Many skin disorders where fungi are present, such as barbers' itch, ringworm, and impetigo, are also treated with ultra violet rays. YEARS PASSES

J. D. Robertson, Deputy Minister Public Works, Dies Thursday

John D. Robertson, deputy minister of public works in the provincial government died at his home, 1108 8th avenue at 8 a.m. Thursday, after a lengthy illness. He had been afflicted with several years with valvular heart trouble, necessitating periods of inactivity and complete rest. During the last spring considerable improvement was noted and he had hoped to be up and ready at his desk. This failed to last and he gradually grew weaker, he died on Thursday.

A civil engineer by profession, Mr. Robertson had been many years in the provincial government, his ability as a professional man and administrator being generally recognized and appreciated. He had shown marked aptitude for his service and under the guidance of the late John Stokes, he had gained a knowledge and insight into the public works department that qualified him to succeed the latter on his death. Mr. Stokes' passing had been a great personal loss to Mr. Robertson's family.
